simulation technique

in analysis

A technique for reducing or eliminating analytical errors resulting from interferences, using a reference solution sufficiently similar in quantitative composition to the sample solutions to be analysed that the interferences in the reference and sample solution are equivalent.

Source:
Orange Book, p. 172